A Western Sun

Par Goose

Album : 2025-06-28: Madison Square Garden, New York, NY

Well I caught my eye on a western sun

Something moved, leapt up slow

It said, "My child, son do you recall

Dreaming big, feeling tall?"

Well I lost my height, my timeless wonder

Left them out for the wind to steal

I hid wide eyes behind this fear of falling

I said, "I'm no child, I'm no child at all"

He said don't hold back

Go everywhere

Feel everything

See everyone you want, yourself

Nothing's lost if all you've held

Child your heart's on fire

All of my, my love, it grows out like a vine

Wouldn't be so tangled if time moved slow

I'd rest my shoulders and who knows what we might find

I saw that light grasp and tremble

On a long dark night on an earthbound soul

Tired and weeping, lost and reaching out

Only then will you find yourself

He said don't hold back

Go everywhere

Feel everything

See everyone you want, yourself

Nothing's lost if all you've held

Child your heart's on fire

All of my, my love, it grows out like a vine

Wouldn't be so tangled if time moved slow

I'd rest my shoulders and who knows what we might find

"So rest your eyes on endless sea," he said

Let it rise to the highest depth

You're not this body, it's only a spark of light

From the endless fire you hold inside

He said don't hold back

Go everywhere

Feel everything

See everyone you want, yourself

Nothing's lost if all you've held

Child your heart's on fire

All of my, my love, it grows out like a vine

Wouldn't be so tangled if time moved slow

I'd rest my shoulders

And who knows what we might find
