Burning Bridges

Par Mest

Album : Burning Bridges

It was a late Thursday night

When I decided to write this song

Just me, bow-wow, my dirty floor

All the herb is gone

Everyone's asleep

But the TV is still on

Debating the past three years

What I did right and wrong

So tell me is this world we live in alright?

Why does every conversation end in a fight?

Why does every fight keep us up all damn night?

'Cause I ain't trying to see the sun rise today

I've been burning bridges

Always burning bridges

Just living life, what do you know?

At 22 I've learned all I need to know

I've made mistakes, I've burned a bridge

Apologize, what, when there's only one life to live

When everybody's gone

And the radio's still on

That's when I realize

That's all I need to carry on

So tell me is this world we live in alright?

And why does every conversation end in a fight?

Why does every fight keep us up all damn night?

'Cause I ain't trying to see the sun rise today

I've been burning bridges

Always burning bridges

I've been burning bridges

Always burning bridges

Tell me is this world we live in alright?

Why does every conversation end in a fight?

Try to explain this life in black and white

Guess I'm gonna see the sun rise today

I've been burning bridges

Always burning bridges

I've been burning bridges

Always burning bridges

I've been burning bridges

Always burning bridges
